Library Notes

In this month of recognition and recollection of the societal contributions of African Americans, I share a quote from Sojourner Truth (African American human rights activist and poet) that I found both pertinent and appealing, given my present SBS vocation. She believed "It is the mind that makes the body." For all of us as parental educators, we know the importance of nurturing and nourishing that interplay. Reading (through whatever medium), however, is the mind adventure we seek to gratefully encourage (through SBS community support), whatever the current library theme offered.
